

Erasmus Mobility- Turkey, Aksaray

Made by:

- When we first started our journey to Aksaray, we were all nervous since we've never travelled by plane until then and we were scared by the whole process since we were getting out of our comfort zone and we were departing from our familiar atmosphere.

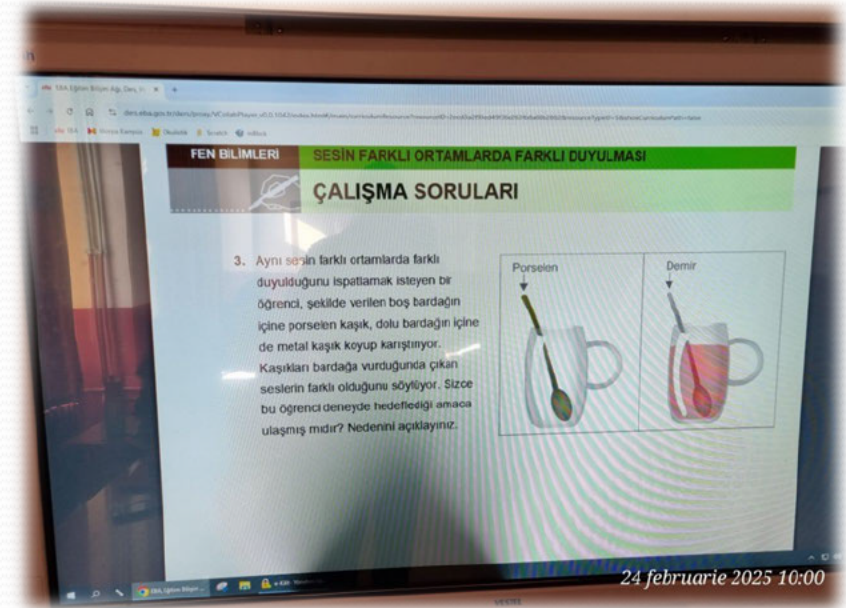

- We were properly coordinated and guided at each step, by the amazing teachers: Bogoi Costel, Ionescu Aliana and Poasca Angelica, to ensure all of us were safe and sound, and had a great experience. According to travelers, planes may seem scary at first, but once you get to experience the flight, you might think otherwise. From my own experience, I felt a bit scared when the plane took off, but when it landed, it left me thinking that it wasn't that bad. On the plane coming back, the flight attendant served us some chicken sandwiches, making sure that we were not hungry for the rest of the flight. We played some games on the touch-screen to help us pass the time.

- Regarding our activities there, in Aksaray, we first got to visit the Yusuf Hakiki Baba Ortaokulu School, where we were greeted with warm welcome, the National Anthem and a full tour of the school, where we could experience the way Turkish students learn.

- After that we went to the city center, where we entered an art studio, focused on the Ebru technique, a way of painting with colors placed on water, then, dipping the canvas in it to create beautiful patterns, which was my favourite activity of all time.

- Then we went to the Underground city of Saratli. It was amazing since you had to move in a certain way to fit those tight spaces.

- The next day we went to Capadoccia, more exactly to the Cinnes Valley, full of splendor thanks to the rock formations and the breath-taking views.

- Then we went to the underground Guray Museum of Ceramics, where students learned all the secrets of pottery, the craft having a massive cultural significance.
